NEWS OF THE WEEK FROM MAYNE ISLAND

American Steamer Caught in Tide Rip in Active Pass—Two Men Drown

(Review Correspondent.)
MAYNE ISLAND, July 15.—Quite a gloom was thrown over the Pass Sunday morning when two men lost their lives. The American steamer "Morning Star," of Seattle, passing through Active Pass at noon struck a tide rip off Mary Ann Point, and listing over some of her deck cargo shifted carrying away several feet of her starboard bulwarks. Unfortunately three of her crew who were sitting on top of the freight watching the salmon trolling, went overboard with the cargo; only one was picked up by a Japanese fishing boat, the other two were never seen again and though search was made it proved unsuccessful. The vessel then drifted on with a considerable list, then the motor boat "Val" took her in tow for about three miles up the Gulf, meanwhile the crew who were jettisoning the deck cargo, brought her up on an even keel when she was able to proceed to Vancouver under her own steam.

At the evening service, the Vicer aluded to the sad disaster and special prayers were offered for those who had suffered such a tragic bereavement. The waters of the Pass had looked so calm and peaceful that Sunday morning, it was hard to believe such an accident could take place.

Mrs. Wheatley and her daughters, after a pleasant holiday with friends in Victoria, returned to the island on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Payne and daughters have taken Mr. Hall's cottage for the summer.

Mrs. and Miss Perry are in Mrs. Shaw's cottage.

Mrs. Naylor is expecting friends to camp in the orchard, and has fitted up Mr. Cain's home for summer boarders. She has built neat little houses on the beach for the benefit of the bathers.

Mr. and Mrs. Stretton came over for tennis on Friday.

Mrs. Gilmer entertained at tea on Saturday, in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Lever, the following guests: Mrs. and Miss Maude, Col. and Lady Constance Pawkes, Mrs. George Macaulay and table.

Every Sunday morning Colonel Pawkes, with the permission of the Vicer, holds a children's service in the church.

LADIES' AID HOLD ANNUAL PICNIC

The members of the Ladies' Aid of the Union church spent a very delightful day Wednesday, July 16, on Pym Island, where they held their annual picnic, leaving Sidney wharf by Capt. Peterson's launch at 10 a.m.

A very appetizing lunch was served on the beach and during the afternoon an impromptu program was arranged, which included: Three-legged race, stout ladies choosing slim partners, which was won by Mrs. H. F. Knight and Mrs. Ramsay; walking race, won by Mrs. Ramsay; recitations by Mrs. J. Armstrong and Mrs. J. Jackson; exhibition of club drill by Mrs. T. Griffiths, accompanied on the kazoo by Mrs. Ramsay; humorous song by Mrs. Robinson; Irish jig by Mrs. Ramsay; duet by Mrs. Knight and Mrs. A. Hollands; running race in bathing costume, won by Mrs. J. T. Taylor. This program caused a great deal of amusement to the rest of the party as well as to the competitors themselves.

Swimming, boating, novelty stunts and fortune telling was indulged in, and some of the ladies explored the island. A very dainty tea was served, the party leaving the island about 6 p.m. after having spent a very jolly time. Visitors from Edmonton joined the party.

WAR MEMORIAL PARK—AN APPEAL

North Saanich has a record second to none, for service during the Great War. We all feel justly proud of, not only the number who joined, but of the achievements of "The Boys," during those "Great Days." It was decided that the best way to perpetuate the memory of those who had given their lives in the "Great Cause," was to care for "The Living."

An Athletic Park was purchased for the benefit of our youth, where many sports and games can be played. In order that these grounds may be worthy of the "Great Object" desired, the trustees appeal to all residents to unite and make a definite effort and put the Park in fit shape.

Funds are first needed to under-drain, plant trees, and place a fence in the correct position, an invitation is extended to all, to forward suggestions and plans for the development in order that the original idea may be carried out.

The trustees have confidence in the citizens of North Saanich that they will not fail, but will assist to carry through plans and develop the War Memorial Park to the credit of all.

POOR OLD "THISTLE"

Delivered at a mass indignation meeting of the "Thistles" of North Saanich, held in the War Memorial Park on Thursday night last, as a protest against the finding of the Sidney Board of Trade stigmatising British subjects as "Obnoxious Weeds." The Park was so overcrowded that hundreds of "Thistles" unable to gain admission had to content themselves with standing along each side of the "Sidewalk" on Beacon Avenue—some of them are there yet. The Hon. Mary Lavina McTavish Thistle, of Thistle-down, Deep Cove, occupied the chair, and in a few well-chosen remarks introduced the speaker who, in a voice trembling with emotion, and glistening tears rolling down his weather-beaten cheeks, recited:

Poor old "Thistle"—emblem of the Scot,
What a naughty reputation you have got.
They're after you in Sidney—frightened for your seeds,
And class you now, "especially," amongst the "Obnoxious Weeds."

Poor old thistle, don't you feel ashamed,
To know the Sidney Board of Trade have you thusly named?
Famous in history, known the world round,
You're doing well in Saanich, yet, they want to cut you down.

Tricky old thistle, you have got their "goat,"
Every time you're "sat upon" you touch a tender spot;
It teaches them a lesson—to let "tickly" things alone,
And if you think I'm joshing—well, just ask Bob Sloan.

Brave old thistle, be watchful for your life,
"Hooton" and his gang are out with scythe and carving knife;
They've often tried to scalp you, but, their efforts proved in vain,
For every time the spring came round you just popped up again.

Hardy old thistle, you'll live for years to tell,
That "And" wouldn't cut you down—he loves you far too well;
I've never known a Scotsman yet—in fact, they aren't made,
That would "dare" to slash the thistle down, to please the Board of Trade.

—BOB SLOAN.

Much Business Discussed at Annual School Meeting Held Last Saturday Evening

(Review Correspondent.)

PENDER ISLAND, July 15.—The annual school meeting, which has been the cause of a great deal of contention for some years, and which, therefore was largely attended, was held on Saturday night in the school-house. This, at least, is one of the few occasions on which all eligible electors and residents make a point of attending, and also of being on time. Mr. Alex. Hamilton was elected to the important position of chairman, and carried out his duties in a creditable manner. The secretary of the school board, Mr. J. S. Stigings, was called upon to read the report of the year's work, the financial part of which showed a cash balance on hand of $149. The year had opened with only one teacher in charge of 39 pupils, and when this number increased to 42 in February, a second teacher was secured for the remainder of the term. Mr. Jack Clague, trustee, gave a lengthy report of the work done, on behalf of the trustees, the same meeting with some criticism. Following this came the nomination of a trustee to fill the vacancy left through the retirement of J. S. Stigings, who also was open for re-election. Mr. S. P. Corbett was nominated, the vote taken by secret ballot, and the result was 52-25 in favor of S. P. Corbett. Mr. Evan Hooson was re-elected as auditor. It was unanimously decided to make the salary of the two teachers equal, that of $900 per year. The all-important question of what should

Lawn Tennis Party Given by Mr. and Mrs. Pollok Enjoyable Affair

(Review Correspondent.)

FULFORD HARBOR, July 14.—The lawn tennis party given by Mr. and Mrs. H. Pollok at their home, "Lyonesse," last Sunday was a very much enjoyed affair. There were a number of keenly contested games played in the finals, the players were so evenly matched that it was a toss as to which side would win. At the finish Mrs. Speed and Mr. Dermot Crofton beat Mrs. Corbett and Mr. Pollok. Among others present were Mrs. Burton and Mr. Eric Burton, of Victoria, Mrs. Bryant, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. L. Hamilton, Miss Helen MacKenzie, of Victoria, Mr. and Mrs. Grant, Miss Hamilton, Miss Mabel Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. C. Morris, Mr. Speed, Mr. Desmond Crofton and others.

What might have been a serious fire was nipped in the bud a few days ago, when Mrs. Reid, who was alone at the time, found their barn on fire. She pluckily rushed to put it out whilst a neighbor, passing at the time, assisted her. When the blaze was extinguished it was discovered that the fire was started by a piece of broken glass lying where the hot sun was shining on it, which ignited the dry stuff behind it. This should be a lesson to us all, not to leave pieces of broken glass lying about, especially in dry weather.

Mrs. Reid has been in the hospital for several days; we are glad to hear she is improving.

Mr. T. M. Jackson has returned home from the hospital, where he has been for some time. He is rapidly recovering from his nasty accident.

The Sidney Table Tennis Club came to Fulford last Monday for a picnic. Owing to the rain that fell at intervals through the day they were not able to come early as arranged, so they made an evening picnic of it, arriving at the "White House" soon after 6 p.m. and returning to Sidney later in the evening by moonlight.

A dance was held in the Fulford Hall last Saturday which was a great success and much enjoyed by all present. James Island orchestra supplied the music.

Mr. Fatt, of Victoria, and his son, George, spent the week-end at the "White House."

The heavy and refreshing rain that fell on Monday was very much welcomed by all who have gardens here, and although it was late in coming, there is still hopes of saving many of the crops.

NOTES BY THE WAY
By "Observer"

The latest semi-eleemosynary institution proposed for Victoria by the good ladies of that town, is a "Hostel for Homeless Men." In support the promoters quote the saying of an Episcopal Bishop, who some time ago toured B. C., and called it the "land of homeless men." Up to this time many people thought the homeless men he referred to were the husbands of the many women who belong to the 101 different women's organizations, and who spend most of their time working for those organizations.

One of the latest brain storms that has attacked some of the brainy people of this island is that the name of Vancouver Island should be changed. What name is the choice of these learned men is not mentioned, but more than likely it will not have anything to do with suggesting that this is an Island of Manufacturers. The only name suggested is that of Victoria Island, thus carrying out the fact that some people in Victoria have of addressing their letters "V. I." instead of "B. C.," thus trying to advertise Victoria at the cost of the rest of the province. Would it not be better for the movers of this idea to turn their energies to making the Island better for the poor men to live in, and bring up their families with the idea that they will remain here and populate our country instead of importing more people from other lands to take their place. Change the name of the Island. The idea would be laughable if it was not so crude.

The latest moving pictures seem to be all titles. Everyone from the person who wrote the scenario to the one who put the address on the express parcel addressed to the Movie House seem to have their name mentioned. Give us more and better pictures, but leave out 95% of the titles. They are of no interest to the general public.

Sidney has great cause to be proud of the progress which has been made by the locality through the efforts of the Board of Trade, which has been supported by other members of the community. The establishment of the Auto Ferry to Anacortes during 1922, and the later ferry to Bellinham has advertised this place to its advantage. The building of the Arch at the Ferry Landing under the auspices of the Board has also embellished the landing place, and the opening of the Auto Park on the C. N. R. property, which last year was secured under lease by the Board has further brought credit to this place. This year the Board has made arrangements with Mr. Greenwood to manage the Park, and many general camping parties who spent their first night on the island have made it the stopping place, also upon leaving the island, so pleased were they with its facilities. Many people in Sidney are not aware that we have such a Park in our environs, and it would be to their advantage to inspect it and aid in advertising it. It is hoped that many industries may be induced to make their headquarters in Sidney through the publicity given this locality through the Auto Tourists. Let us all wake up and boost our home town, but without any hot air or other boom tactics.

"What is the matter with Sidney?" is the question that many people are asking these days. The answer in the minds of many is our lack of "Community Spirit." While it may not be necessary for YOU to work, still even if retired you can take an interest in the locality in which you make your home and make it better and more interesting place for your neighbors to live in. Leave your cosy fireplace and help others make our community better.

It is rumored that we will soon have the second fish reduction plant established in our midst. Work is being rushed in getting machinery for the first plant manufactured. If sufficient of our people undertake the supplying of dogfish to these plants, it should be no problem to keep the Oriental fisherman from this locality. Not only will these plants give lots of work and distribute ready cash, but if several million dogfish are destroyed each year it will help the Salmon industry, for the dogfish is the scourge of the seas, destroying especially, the best of our edible fish.

The question of how to stop "Bootlegging" is one of the most important in the opinion of many the greatest aid to the "Bootlegger" is the Dominion Government. The Government allows liquor to be stored in bond, under their charge. They allow it to be taken out of bond for export, free of duty and excise. This liquor is shipped to "Mexico," and the boats carrying it often make the "trip" in two days and return, ready for another trip to "Mexico." Some of this liquor is smuggled into the United States, but a great deal of it is smuggled back into Canada, from "Mexico," thus enabling the "Bootlegger" to undersell the Government. Liquor Control Board. If the Dominion Government withdrew the bonding privilege from liquors of all kinds, bootlegging would have to stop, and the only persons who would suffer would be a number of aliens, who make the export business their principal means of subsistence. If you don't believe the latter sentence, obtain a list of the owners of the principle liquor export houses in B. C., and see if you can pronounce the names of the shareholders and officials and also try and find out how many of them are of British origin.

Here and There

It is announced that vigorous efforts will be made by the Government of Manitoba to effect the actual settlement of 224,000 acres of vacant provincial land now under the administration of the Crown.

For the week ended June 21st traffic earnings of the Canadian Pacific Railway amounted to $3,301,000, as compared with $3,159,000 for the corresponding period of 1923. This is an increase of $142,000 or 4.4 per cent.

Reports from the Rouyn gold fields of Quebec continue to indicate a great future for that territory. Development is proceeding apace and the English capital now flowing into Canada in search of good investments is interesting itself in this area.

Three carloads of seed grain are being shipped weekly from the provincial seed cleaning and marketing plant at Edmonton, Alta. About 50,000 bushels of seed grain have been handled by the plant since last fall and 20,000 bushels more will be handled before the year's seeding is completed.

The International Paper Company intends to add two new machines to their plant in Three Rivers, Que., so as to increase their production from 300 to 450 tons daily. Another project is also under consideration, viz., to build a plant in Batiscan instead of enlarging the Three Rivers one.

"Worth $100 to Me
Relieved Eczema and Piles"

Mrs. Peter A. Palmer, Saltburn, Sask., writes:

"Dr. Chase's Ointment has completely relieved me of eczema and piles. I also used this Ointment for my baby, who broke out in eczema. A few applications were all that was necessary in her case. Dr. Chase's Ointment has been worth a hundred dollars to me, before using it I had spent a great deal more than that in unsuccessful treatment from doctors. We have also used Dr. Chase's other medicines, the Nerve Food having restored my health after suffering from severe nerve trouble when a girl."

OUR NEW SERIAL STORY

CHAPTER XX.

Late in the afternoon on the day of receipt of the message from Joe, Nora was sitting in a little garden summer-house which, situated in a massive hedge of Banksia roses, looked out across the fields into the golden west. The more sedate among the rooks were cawing in the tall elms in a corner of the field, while the loud majority were wheeling into line against the sunset sky. Nora rose and stood in the doorway of the summer-house, pensive, dreamy-eyed, and happy-sad. A cluster of the white roses drooping overhead offered their delicate scent to her; a mavis sang of love, not so much in his tree near by as in her heart; the balmy evening zephyr played with the wayward hair about her temples, whispering messages from far across the sea, and there in the "golden lightning of the setting sun" she felt there was a boundless joy in which she had a part. A trembling sigh rose from her breast. A look of intense longing came in her deep blue eyes. She leaned forward and held up her arms to something she saw there in the golden sky. At that moment some one passed through a gap in the hedge of roses and stood before her. She gave a little start, her arms fell, and she remained looking blankly into Michael's sinister face.

"More visions, Nora?" he asked, with a smile that just stopped short of a contemptuous sneer. "I thought you had grown out of that hysterical nonsense. What do you imagine you have seen now?"

"If you think it is hysterical nonsense why do you ask me?" said Nora, turning a trifle pale.

"I have no doubt that you actually see things," returned Michael; "but I've told you dozens of times that a skillful hypnotist can make his subjects see all kinds of absurd things as clearly as we see these roses." He plucked one from the drooping cluster, and mangled it ruthlessly in his fingers as he went on. "When you see what you call a vision you are simply hypnotized, and see whatever is suggested to you."

"But there was no one here to suggest anything to me," she said calmly, holding her own.

"That doesn't matter. Self-hypnotism is a common enough thing, and in certain states of mind you can suggest visions to yourself, which, if you are in the hypnotic condition, will appear as if actually taking place before your very eyes. I haven't studied this sort of thing for nothing, and I've never been backward in giving you the benefit of my conclusions."

Nora was slightly disconcerted by his argument on this point now, as she had always been in the past. She seemed in a confusion of conflicting thought and emotion, and said nothing.

"Tell me what you saw," asked Michael again. "The best way to get out of this habit of self-hypnotism and seeing things is to be perfectly open and outspoken about it. There's no telling what it may lead to if you treasure it up. Come now, trot it out in the open, and you'll find it won't affect you so strongly."

His words sounded so reasonable, and his manner was so full of apparent solicitude for her well-being, that, after a little hesitation, she told him.

"I saw a ship," she said; "and—" "Yes, of course," broke in Michael. "You saw the Lagos as clearly as you can see my boots."

"It must have been the Lagos," said Nora, raising her eyes to his face. "For I saw Joe standing in the bows."

Michael laughed in contempt and bitterness. "Well, I'm blest!" he said. "How easily women are deceived by their own imaginations! Look here! A calm evening, birds singing, a dreamy sort of sunset—all these are conducive to the kind of self-hypnotism with which you are troubled. Then the telegram that came this morning is uppermost in your mind, and suggests to you what I suppose is taking place in reality—a ship called the Lagos, somewhere in the Atlantic, with Joe on board. You are excessively simple, Nora, to be so easily tricked by your own imagination; and even simpler still to fancy that Joe cares two straws for you. Why, do you think that he would have stayed away all these years if he thought anything about you?"

Nora's Irish eyes flashed at him, and the color rose in her cheeks.

"I may be very simple," she said, "but you're simpler still if you imagine that I'm going to let you work round to a subject which I've settled once and for all with a flat 'No!' Joe may not care for me, but I would sooner have his frown than your warmest smile, which only freezes me. There!"

"Listen, Nora!" he cried, and seized her hand. "I know I am cold, and sometimes I think I shall lose hope of myself and become a bad man if you, angel that you are, tread me beneath your feet. Heaven knows how I could live a better life if you took pity upon me. Have you never thought, Nora, what it is to have a man's very soul in your power to save or to destroy? One kind glance from you would lead me to better things; one word of hope would fill me with high aspirations and noble resolves; one touch of your hand would guide me safe over the dark depths of my nature to the gates of heaven. Nora, I appeal to you. I am full of evil; nothing but your love can save me from things to which without you, I shall surely drift in the dark. Will you give me one word of hope?"

A student of the occult sciences, on looking at Nora's dark brown hair contrasted with her deep blue eyes set beneath black eyebrows in a face so perfectly oval, would have said at once that she was gifted with the faculty of clairvoyance. A student of human nature, seeing her return Michael's look of passion with a penetrating gaze and without flinching, would have said that her clairvoyance was a matter of seeing through those who could not see through her.

"That kind of thing does not deceive me if it does you," she said firmly. "I know you far better than you do yourself. Your words are clever, but there is a trick behind them. You would extract a word or a look of pity now, and when perhaps I am angry with Joe for having forgotten me, you will presume on that word or look. Besides, you are acting a part."

"But, Nora, I mean every word I say."

"No doubt; you act your part so well that even you are taken in. And you talk about drifting into evil ways. Now, do you suppose that a girl like myself, without even a spark of what is called love for you, could cope with evil tendencies which you yourself have failed to check? But apart from that, Michael, I would try to help you—indeed, I would—if I could only trust you; but I do not, and cannot, so there the matter ends."

She turned away decisively, and, passing through the gap in the hedge, walked up towards the house. Had she been deceived in her judgment of Michael? To gather from the expression on his face as he remained standing by the summer-house one would have thought not. He had a kind of beaten look, but soon he gave a sneering laugh, and shrugged his shoulders.

"Simple!" he said—"excessively simple! When! but it's the sort of simplicity that takes some careful handling. She doesn't know that she is only worth having for what she gets on her wedding-day by the terms of her father's will; the paper even doesn't know what that sealed packet contains until he opens it on her wedding-day. No; she is not aware that I have gleaned this interesting fact about herself, and yet she dismisses my love-making as a lot of acting, and tells me that she cannot trust me. Strange that a woman should be so simple and childlike in some things, and as wise as a wizard in others. She believes her visions which are not genuine; why shouldn't she believe me?" And he smiled grimly as he turned on his heel and walked away.

CHAPTER XXI.

"Thought-reading! Oh, do; it's such fun! Nora, you guessed where they put the thimble the other night; see if you can do it again."

Beauty Flies For Speckled Beauties

above pretty girl, one of a party of five, has just come in from a flying trip to a nearby lake and is justly proud of her string of speckled beauties.

St. Jovite in the mountains of Northern Quebec is famous as a summer and winter resort. Winter times they use a wingless aeroplane for ski joring, but in summer they put the wings and a body on and use it for fishing and swimming. Behind almost every mountain of the Laurentians there is a lake or two—so the plane comes in handy for jumping over the hills to chase the sporting bass and trout to their lairs. The

The speaker was a fair-haired girl—one of a party of some nine or ten persons gathered in the drawing-room at Sefton Hall for the purpose of enjoying themselves according to the approved methods. They had exhausted all the names of books they could think of. The inevitable man with a padlock on his foot had shown himself as canvassing agent for "Locke on the Human Understanding," and a blushing damsel had posed as Lady Godiva in full dress on the day after the ride, when some one, who had just met peeping Tom, pointed the finger of scorn at her, and remarked in the immortal words of Mark Twain, "Tom Sawyer!" These things had all been duly enacted, and more than one ancient evening game had been re-enacted and thrashed out, when, in answer to some one's suggestion that they should try thought-reading, the fair-haired girl made the remark we have recorded.

"Do you believe in thought-reading, Captain Brereton?" asked a little lady, who, when she smiled, might have been dated at forty English summers, or when she looked natural, at thirty-five Scottish winters.

Captain Brereton leaned towards her, and said very emphatically—

"Well, you know, I used to laugh at it, but when Nora found that thimble behind a book in the library book-case, where I had put it myself in the dark, I made up my mind to believe in it."

"And did she really find it without being guided to the spot and pushed at it, as they generally do?"

"Oh yes; she said she saw it behind a small book. We asked what was the name of the book, and she told us. Then we adjourned in a body to the library, found the volume in one of the shelves, and the thimble behind it. The strange part of it was that, as I had hidden the thimble in the dark, neither I nor any one else had seen the title of the book before she named and pointed it out."

"I think you must be mistaken in that, daddy," said Michael, who had been standing near by listening to their conversation. "Science admits the truth of thought-reading, but not of clairvoyance. Sooner than jump to the conclusion that Nora actually saw the book and the thimble as they existed in the shelf through a thick wall, I should maintain that she merely saw by sympathy with you the vivid impression of the thing in your mind. The latter, which is mere thought-reading, would satisfy all the demands of the case, and therefore we do not require the second-sight theory at all."

"But, my boy," said Captain Brereton, warming up, "if the impression did not exist in my mind, how could she see it there by sympathy? When I placed the thimble behind the book, I hadn't the smallest idea which book it was. I scarcely even noticed the shelf, let alone the position of the book in the shelf."

Michael held his ground without abating a single point of his contention. It was a very important question to his subtle and clear-reasoning mind. Had he known exactly how important this very point might prove in clearing up a mystery and in leading to the conviction of a murderer, perhaps he would not have stuck up for it so stoutly.

"You may not have seen the name of the book," he said, "but no doubt you noticed casually that it was a thin book, between two thick ones; and of course certain characteristics of the binding were evident to your touch. That being so, I cannot imagine any one handling such a book in his own library without having some idea of the title of it."

"But I tell you I hadn't the ghost of an idea of the title when I took the book out and replaced it. It was done so quickly and on the spur of the moment that if I had been asked to put my finger on the book five minutes later, I could not have done so."

"I don't care," persisted Michael, doggedly; "it's quite possible to have a thing in one's mind without being conscious of it. I am quite convinced that the name and exact position of that book had registered themselves in your mind, although you were not aware of the fact. It frequently happens that adepts at thought-reading describe incidents which have happened in the lives of persons present, but have been forgotten to such an extent that they are amazed at their being recalled. There is no doubt a subconscious memory with which the thought-reader comes in touch."

Michael's reasoning almost convinced his father, but he would not give in as he saw the clear importance of the point.

"Well, my son," he said, after a little puzzled thought; "we've often agreed this point before, and neither of us can convince the other. Now, person to get a clear impression of I'll tell you what we'll do. We'll let Dr. L., who, you say, is life, when it happens that one mind a great authority on these matters, receives a sudden vivid idea, and another, who is in close sympathy with it, is able to give it."

"Very good," said Michael, with a smile of triumph. "I shall be perfectly willing to abide by Dr. L.'s decision. But, in the mean time, we can test the thing for ourselves very easily."

"How, how?" said the little lady of forty summers, eagerly. "I'd give anything to see a thing of this kind actually tested. Generally when I go about asking for a test, the mystery-mongers say, 'Ah, the laws of the occult world do not permit us to give tests of these things.' Do tell me how you will test it, Mr. Brereton."

"Simply enough," said Michael. "First, we'll hide an object so that every one here except Nora shall know exactly where it is hidden. Then, if Nora locates it accurately, well and good—thought-reading pure and simple. Then we'll select some one who will take another object and hide it somewhere in the house without any other person's knowledge. That person must then leave the house. If, under these conditions, subject to such variations as she may require, Nora locates the thing correctly, I will admit for the present that clairvoyance, or second-sight, has been sufficiently established; but if, on the other hand, she is unable to find it, I think you must admit that it is because its whereabouts is absolutely unknown to any one present."

"Capital, capital!" cried the little lady, clapping her hands. "It would be difficult to have a more thorough test. What do you think, Captain Brereton?"

"Well, there is one thing you have forgotten," said the captain. "A clairvoyant generally requires some connecting link between the lost object and herself. For instance, if she is to see an absent person, she must have a lock of his hair or some object peculiar to him."

"That is reasonable," returned Michael; "at least, it is as reasonable as most of the fads of clairvoyants. When we come to the clairvoyant experiments, I will detach a part of the object I propose to hide, and give it to Nora before having the remainder hidden."

CHAPTER XXII.

Michael was not long in setting the drawing-room in order. The girl with the fair hair acted as his assistant, and very soon all the guests were seated round the room, with a pervading expression of intense interest on their faces, for they had all heard of thought-reading, but few, if any, could actually claim that they had seen it properly done.

"Now, ladies and gentlemen," said Michael, when all was ready, "as Nora has kindly consented to thought-read to me, I will just explain exactly how the thing works. It is claimed—indeed, it has been sufficiently proved—that, by means of sympathetic vibrations between the modified ether or nerve atmosphere surrounding one person and that surrounding another, an image strongly impressed upon the mind of one may be transmitted to the mind of another without speech or any external sign. Now, for a mental image to be communicated in this way, it must be made very vivid in the one person's mind for the other of us can convince the other. Now, person to get a clear impression of I'll tell you what we'll do. We'll let Dr. L., who, you say, is life, when it happens that one mind a great authority on these matters, receives a sudden vivid idea, and another, who is in close sympathy with it, is able to give it."

B. C. LEADS PROVINCES IN RETAIL SALES

British Columbia is putting up a very strong bid for first place among the provinces in business activity. Employment, bank clearings and business failures show substantial improvement, whilst building at least maintains a level trend. Bank clearings have shown a gradual expansion during the past two years, and are now close to a high point for the period, with an upward tendency.

The employment situation in the coast provinces is much more satisfactory than in other parts of the country. The position is now 102, while the highest May figure for any other province is 94, which represents the situation in Quebec. This is due largely to the increased activity in the Portland Canal area.

Less failures for British Columbia also indicates better business. A decline in the number of failures has continued since the beginning of 1922, and the total for the first quarter of 1924 was small in relation to that of most of the other sections of the country.

In general, retail business has increased in volume, due in no small measure to the tourist traffic, which yields a larger revenue to this province each summer than to any other. Activity in the mines continues to increase and a number of the old abandoned mines are resuming operations. Reports from the lumber and fishing industries indicate generally satisfactory conditions.—Financial Post.

LOWER TAXATION NEEDED

The basis of recovery of business in Canada cannot be permanent until the affairs of Europe are settled, financial and economic stability returned and adequate immigration and lighter taxes are achieved in the Dominion. This is the picture of Canada's outlook presented to Hudson's Bay Co. shareholders by Sir Robert Kindersley, Governor. Distinct progress has been made and was being made toward a permanent settlement of European affairs. Every day's delay in the operation of the Dawes report, he declared, inevitably lessened its chance of complete success. Acceptance of this report must be speedily followed, however, by sound financial methods and by credit facilities to Europe on a large scale, without which stabilization of European currency could not be permanently established. "I think," he said, "stabilization will do more to stimulate international trade than any other factor." Co-operation between the United States and Great Britain was essential, but this could be brought about on the scale demanded only when English currency was at a parity and England could rescind the prohibition of free export of gold.

CHEAP AMERICAN MONEY FINDING WAY TO CANADA

There is the heavy buying of Canadian bonds in New York for investment in Canadian securities, and also, it is said, in anticipation of Canadian financing in New York. Owing to the unusually cheap money in the States, bankers and investors are seeking employment for their surplus funds elsewhere. The situation is one which is working greatly to the advantage of this country in that it has the same effect as large scale advertising. When American funds flow into this country in large quantities, the owners of the money naturally take a greater interest in Canadian conditions and become better acquainted with the opportunities for profitable investment here.

CANADA'S PROGRESS SO FAR THIS CENTURY VERY GREAT

During the first quarter of the 20th century, says the National Resources Intelligence Service of the Department of the Interior, Canadians have seen their country become in fact, as well as in promise, the controlling factor in the world's wheat trade, one of the giants of international commerce. They have seen her advance at an astonishing rate in the production of pulp and paper commodities of foremost importance in modern civilization. They have seen her, with a relatively small population, extend her manufacturing activities in countless directions until she is ranked today high among the industrial nations of the world. They have seen her engage in trade abroad, both as a selling and as a buying country, on a scale such as few business men would have imagined or dared to prophesy twenty or even fifteen years ago.

MAINTENANCE OF SALES FORCES A HEAVY CHARGE ON FOREST PRODUCTS INDUSTRIES

Every British Columbian's Duty to Render Assistance to the Lumber Industry

EVERY man and woman in British Columbia should endeavor to realize what the lumber industries mean to the community they live in and should constitute themselves active boosters of B.C. forest products.

This is one of the readiest ways in which they can help the industry that has put this province on the map and is busily engaged in keeping it there.

No merchandise, however unique, can sell itself in these days of substitutes and keen competition. The searching task of finding steady markets for their products is perhaps the most important the lumberman of this province is up against.

Market Expansion

The maintenance of costly sales forces and far-reaching market extension organization is a very heavy charge amounting to millions yearly on the lumber and allied industries of British Columbia.

New markets must be found and old ones preserved. Agents at home and abroad must be employed in keeping open the channels along which B. C. wood products are distributed to consumers in every part of the world.

In exchange for these millions of dollars spent in the marketing of our forest products the people of British Columbia receive what really amounts to their principle means of support.

Every British Columbian should therefore ask himself or herself how best they can help out the industry that means so much to them.

This series of articles communicated by the Timber Industries Council of British Columbia.

CROP REPORT

MONTREAL, July 10.—Below will be found a brief synopsis of telegraphic reports received at the head office of the Bank of Montreal from its branches. The branch managers have complete and intimate knowledge of each local situation and are in close touch with crop conditions in all sections of the districts mentioned.

General

Rains following a week of exceptionally hot weather have improved the situation in the Prairie Provinces except in East and South East Alberta and a few parts of Saskatchewan, where rain is urgently needed. Wheat in the shot blade and while the season is backward, the conditions in the Prairie Provinces on the whole are fairly satisfactory. In Ontario the season still about ten days late but good growth is now being made. In Quebec Province an average hay crop is expected. In some parts of the Maritime Provinces rain is needed but reports are favorable generally. In British Columbia hot dry weather continues and rain is badly needed.

Prairie Provinces

Edmonton District—The whole district has been benefitted by the heavy rains in the last two days following a period of the hottest weather experienced in many years. Calgary District—Rain is needed in Northeastern area but generally speaking prospects continue good. Wheat well in shot blade and fall rye headed out. Lethbridge District—In West and South crops progressing favorably. Conditions satisfactory in North. Saskatoon District—Exceptionally hot weather, with insufficient rain has been experienced during the past week. With further rains, prospects will be fair in some districts, but only light crops are now expected in districts tributary to Saskatoon and North Battleford. The situation generally is not promising. Pastures are poor and the hay crop light. Regina District—Crops generally standing up well. Winnipeg District—Good rains have improved the situation, wheat generally in shot blade. The condition of coarse grains is fairly satisfactory.

Province of Quebec

Grain crops generally are of good appearance. An average crop of hay is expected. Rye are late but are doing well. Fruit prospects are good. Strawberries are fairly plentiful. Potatoes are only fair.

Province of Ontario

The season still about ten days late but good growth is now being made and indications are for favorable good average crop. Fall wheat very promising. It is well headed out with crop prospects above average. Prospects are for an average crop of Spring grains. Corn is backward but an average crop is expected. Hay generally will be of good average crop. Clover and alfalfa are excellent. Cutting has commenced. Roots are promising. Pasture generally satisfactory. Fruit prospects are good.

Maritime Provinces

New Brunswick—Potatoes are doing well but the crops generally suffering from lack of rain. Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island—General conditions are excellent. The Annapolis apple crop is uneven. Strawberries are plentiful everywhere.

Province of British Columbia

Haying is well under way. The yield will be a little below average. A good grain crop is expected in the Fraser Valley, elsewhere fair. Grasshoppers are causing serious damage in the Okanagan and dry belt. Apples and pears are sizing up well but will be a short crop. Small fruits are giving a fair yield. Hops are in very good condition. Pastureage poor. Good crops indicated in Northern districts.

The Doubling of Joseph Brereton

Nora withdrew, and presently they heard her playing the piano in the morning-room.

"Now, then," resumed Michael, "here's a thimble. I'll place it in the clock here. See!" He deposited the thimble inside the marble clock on the mantelpiece, and continued, "Now, what you all have to do is to concentrate your energies on the mental picture of that clock to the exclusion of everything else. Take a good look at it, and then picture it in your minds as vividly as you can. Ready?"

Everybody assented, and Michael, opening the door, called to Nora. The piano playing ceased, and presently she entered. Michael immediately blindfolded her with a thick handkerchief, and led her into the middle of the room. Strict silence was then enjoined, while all, except Nora, concentrated their minds upon their mental image of the clock.

A minute passed and Nora remained perfectly still. Another minute went by, and in the silence the clock on the mantelpiece ticked guiltily. Presently Nora said—

"I see a clock; it is the clock on the mantelpiece. I feel sure the thimble is inside it."

She dragged the bandage from her eyes and looked round at the guests, and laughed slightly as she saw them in various stages of galloping astonishment.

"I was right, then?" she said, untying the knot in the handkerchief.

All present found their tongues in a chorus of assent, which tailed off into remarks which showed that they were sufficiently astonished to want to see the thing done again.

Every one discussed the matter excitedly. Some became scientific, and argued; others looked very wise, and quoted—

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in our philosophy," and others gave vent to their foolings in all sorts of unanswerable questions. One alone attempted to account for the matter in what she thought a sensible and critical way. It was the fair-haired girl, who remarked in a huff—

"We ought to have chosen something else, because as soon as we were all silent, the clock ticked louder than ever, and gave itself away."

"Booby!" said her younger brother in scorn. "How did Miss O'Neill know the clock was giving itself away?"

But the fair-haired girl stuck to her point, and easily secured a repetition of the experiment. This time the thimble was concealed in the folds of the fair hair of the sceptic herself. Her hair was the chief attraction, and it was unlike that of any one in the room. This time she herself placed the bandage over Nora's eyes.

The result was the same. The thimble was found as before, and the fair-haired girl was convinced. But her younger brother had the look of one who is "whipping something off a state" as he inquired—

"Did you have a sort of rain, concocted feeling strongly impressed upon you by some one, Miss O'Neill?"

On Wednesday afternoon last the Community Grocers of Victoria held a picnic at the Chalet grounds which was attended by about 170 persons.

About 50 motor cars transported the party to and from the city. The refreshment committee and the reception committee did particularly good work, the former in supplying the wants of the party and the latter in introducing strangers and assisting with the program of sports.

The management of the Chalet took charge of the serving of tea, after which the prize giving took place. Splendid prizes were awarded, many children receiving them. The donations from the merchants of the city for the sports were conducive to a particularly enjoyable evening.

The annual school meeting took place in the Deep Cove school house on Saturday evening commencing at 7 o'clock. Mr. Alan Calvert acted as chairman. The resignation of Mr. J. Copthorne was accepted with regret. Mr. C. Moses and Mr. F. E. W. Smith were re-elected trustees for the ensuing year. Mr. S. THANKS TO ELECTORS OF THE ISLANDS DISTRICT

To The Editor:

Now that the final count of votes is over; I wish to tender my most sincere thanks to all those who supported me in the late election. No man ever had more devoted, unselfish and enthusiastic friends behind him in an election contest. All that I can give in return is my best services towards obtaining good Government for the Province.

Having been elected I wish to remind all electors, whether they voted for me or not, that I am now their member, and as such I am the servant of all.

I wish the members of all parties to feel free to come to me, if there is any way in which I can be of service to them at any time.

Our thanks are also due in the highest degree to the Returning Officers and Election Officials, headed by Mr. Frank Scott. They acted with the greatest patience, fairness and urbanity which won the admiration of everyone.

The Editor,

"Sidney Review."

Sir:

I have read Mr. Cairns' letter several times over, trying to find out what he is driving at, but without much success. Apparently he does not know the meaning of the word "apology." His P.S. seems to be further evidence that he ought to buy a dictionary. He also speaks of some letter of mine, which only exists in his imagination.

Since a newspaper is a valuable means for the education of the masses, I have done what I have not found it necessary to do for very many years; I have looked up a word in the dictionary. That word is "apology." Here is one definition therein given: "An expression of regret for an improper act or remark." Verb. Sap. I do not think Mr. Cairns is very complimentary to those who voted Provincial recently if he thinks Dr. McIntosh's gentlemanly act, apologizing for the bad taste of his associates in bringing up such a matter at a public meeting, and his belief in their charges (which were protested against by the audience) would have alienated their votes.

Such a storm in a teacup as Mr. Cairns' letters have raised suggest a chronic agitator, whilst his object is wrapped in mystery. My time and your space are alike, too valuable to waste on such piffle as futile letters like these. The one and only letter I wrote was in reply to his uncalled for attack.

The report sent in was, he knows full well, not mine, but after careful enquiry from others, I advised the writer that it was worth inserting. As a matter of fact much more could have been written by my reporter who was present at the meeting and heard everything.

Perhaps it may also be educative to Mr. Cairns to inform him that, where it is called for, an apology is the act of a gentleman.

So far as I am concerned this correspondence must now cease.

Yours,

W. J. L. HAMILTON.

WAR MEMORIAL PARK SOCIETY HELD MEETING

The annual meeting of the Sidney and North Saanich War Memorial Park Society met in Matthews' Hall last Thursday evening. The business of the evening was the election of the Board of Trustees for the ensuing year. Vice-president, Mr. W. The following were nominated and duly elected: Messrs. W. Whiting, R. G. Hill, W. H. Dawes, J. Crossley, J. E. McNeill, N. Watts and S. Roberts.

Some informal discussion took place and several questions were referred to the Trustee Board.

It is my intention to bring into this district the most modern and up-to-date Well-Drilling Machine on the North American Continent. It is manufactured by the Star Drilling Machine Co. of Akron, Ohio, and has proved its superiority over all others by being almost exclusively used in the construction of the Panama Canal (218 against 12 of other makes combined). A highly skilled and long experienced driller will be employed and workmanship will be guaranteed.

There should no longer be any shortage of water in the district.

GRIT AND PLOD

From "The Tech Annual"
McPherson went to Technical Because he wanted to.
McPherson liked the Technical.
And stayed till he was through.

McPherson got a job outside;
He started digging drains.
McPherson soon got up on top
McPherson used his brains.

McPherson soon was made straw boss
He studied hard at night.
McPherson got the foreman's job.
He climbed with all his might.

McPherson still is climbing up,
And higher still he goes.
He's Engineer-in-Chief at last,
Still up his look he throws.

McPherson got a Technical
The grounding he built on;
And any boy can do the same
With grit and plod, my son.

—Colin C. McKenzie.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS FROM PENDER ISLAND

be done regarding the school situation was next in order, and created a warm discussion for some time.
Mr. R. S. W. Corbett moved the adoption of a resolution calling for the immediate alteration of the present school building, converting it into a substantial two-roomed graded school; that the board of school trustees be authorized to borrow sufficient funds to accomplish same, the amount not to exceed $600, and the work to be completed before the beginning of the Fall term. A number of amendments to this resolution were attempted, and also an additional clause asking for some means of conveyance for distant pupils, but these did not carry. Mr.
Spencer Percival then swung in his counter amendment of last year—that no expense be made on the present school building, except what was absolutely necessary for upkeep and repairs—and a vote was then taken by secret ballot. The Percival amendment was defeated by 48-26 and the result greeted with applause.
After still another hour or so of discussion and disagreement, the resolution drawn by Mr. Corbett was taken to the polls, and won by a very gratifying majority of 54-18.
Applause again burst forth, and with the final business and reading of the minutes, the meeting adjourned at 10.30 p.m.—one of the longest on record. During the evening Mr. R.
S. W. Corbett gave a very fine talk anxious for a speedy and friendly
